Pipe Clamps:

- Definition: Pipe clamps are devices used to hold pipes in place. They encircle the pipe and are typically made from materials such as steel, plastic, or rubber.
- Types: Common types include adjustable clamps, rigid clamps, and cushioned clamps, which provide additional support and vibration dampening.
- Applications:
 - Used in plumbing systems to secure water pipes.
 - Employed in HVAC systems to support ductwork and piping.
 - Found in industrial settings to manage fluid transport and prevent pipe movement.

Pipe Hangers:

- Definition: Pipe hangers are devices used to suspend pipes from a ceiling, wall, or structure. They are designed to support the weight of the pipe and any contents it may carry.
- Types: Types of pipe hangers include clevis hangers, strap hangers, and adjustable hangers, each catering to different pipe sizes and installation requirements.
- Applications:
 - Commonly used in commercial and residential plumbing to keep pipes off the ground and reduce strain on joints.
 - Integral in HVAC systems for suspending ductwork and piping.
 - Utilized in industrial facilities to support heavy piping systems and ensure they remain securely in place.
